

Alexander von Humboldt
Stiftung/Foundation

Dr. Yonghe Li will investigate organic solar cells by correlative electron microscopy in a scanning electron microscope. He will also be concerned with methodological aspects of scanning transmission electron microscopy at low electron energies. This electron microscopy technique is particularly interesting for weakly scattering materials and materials, which are susceptible towards knock-on damage.